Harris Produces Three-Point Plan

by Martin Grant

"What I found here at MCC is a really fine college with an excellent reputation to the community and the state ... and it's known throughout the nation as a very fine technical school," stated President Robert Harris at the first press conference of the year with the Quo Vadis staff in Bunker Lounge Monday morning.

Dr. Harris began his term as college president in September, and already has many ideas for furthering the quality of education at MCC. At the present, the college president is in the process of formulating steps for the future progress of MCC while researching what has gone on in the ten years of the college's existence before his arrival.

"Like a man who's trying to get a drink out of a fire hydrant, I'm trying to assimilate as awful lot of material awfully fast," is how Dr. Harris described it.

Harris also stated, "Wherever I go (at MCC) I find very well qualified faculty members and well qualified staff members." He went on to explain that although the faculty and the programs at MCC have helped the college in establishing a strong reputation with the institutions of higher learning our graduates attend and with the industries which employ MCC graduates, however, he still sees room for improvement in the school's role as a community institution.

"Community is the key for MCC. I find the college as a whole meets very adequately the needs of the relatively young people in our community, however, I think we've got to broaden the scope of our mission to include all members of our community — I'd say from ages 18 to 80."

The college president hopes to realize this goal by utilizing more effective teaching techniques. He cites Cooperative Education, open labs, and the use of technology as means of reaching more members of the community without an enormous hike in operating expenses.

When asked what he hoped to accomplish towards better service for those who are already students at MCC, Dr. Harris responded by listing three specific points.

1) Better Data Service — utilizing the campus computer system to keep an active on-line file on each student;

2) Restructuring Student Personnel Services — for easier student access to a more individualized method of qualified, student-oriented counseling;

3) Centralizing Institutional Research — to enhance the decision-making process in regard to career development and job placement.

In closing, Harris also expressed an interest in strengthening MCC's role as a service organization. "I really believe this is a service organization, our purpose is to serve people". As a manifestation of his thoughts in this area, the President is asking each faculty member to examine his role as an educator and to determine who he is really serving by his actions.

Sabbatical Leave Committee Formed

Three members of the college administrative staff and three faculty members have been appointed to the 1976-77 Sabbatical Leave Committee.

The administrators include Thomas J. Regan, Dean of Business Technologies; Barbara Lalancette, Chairperson of the Chemistry Department; and William H. Lindemann Jr., Director of Counseling Services. Faculty members on the committee include John Clancy, Business Administration and Management; Deane Dunly, English; and Charles Tornatore, Accounting.

Applications for sabbatical leave, available to faculty members who have completed seven years of continuous service to the College, may be secured from Professor Dunloy in 106 North I. Upon completion, applications may be submitted to any member of the committee. All applications for leave during the 1976-77 school year must be in the committee's hands before January 1, 1976.

After careful consideration of all applications the committee shall recommend to the President the names of persons to be in turn recommended to the College Board of Trustees for a leave. In the event of a tie vote on the committee, the President shall vote to break the tie.

Approval of requests shall be based on the applicant's seniority, completeness of supporting documentation, and value of the leave to both the individual and the college community.

Nine faculty members were granted sabbatical leaves by the Trustees for the current academic year. Five are currently on leave: Emily Montgomery, Math; Larry Cohen, English; Irene Pearse, Social Sciences; Brendan Gallagher, Electrical Engineering; and Florence Korchin, Physics. Four additional faculty, Kenneth Maugle, Counseling; Reney Myers, English; Ronald Krauth, Physics; and Leo Spencer, Biology will begin their leaves next semester.

Winik :Cause For Applause

by Louise Horgan

Situated around a tricky corner at the end of a long complicated corridor, are the offices of some of the most famous and the most forgotten of the students, staff, and teachers here at MCC! The Theatre People.

I only interviewed two of them, Mrs. Lynn Winik and Miss Joy Baggish. Mrs. Winik will be featured this week and Miss Baggish next week. I discovered a wealth of information and a keen insight into the lives of these "theatre people."

Mrs. Lynn Winik teaches drama and theatre classes here at MCC. She is an actress, a director, a wife, and a mother of three grown children.

She began drama lessons at the age of seven and has worked summer stock since she was 13 years old. She attended Seton Hall, North Western University, and New York University where she majored in drama and directing. She received her Master's degree at NYU where she became interested in teaching when a director asked her to fill in for a class.

After college she worked on a radio series in which she was able to portray 32 different voices.

Mrs. Winik was a protege of Edgar Bergen (Candy Bergen's father). The two became fast friends and Mr. Bergen helped Mrs. Winik make a decisive headway into her acting career.

Mrs. Winik has been in numerous commercials, including "Cadillac Cat Food",

Lynn Winik of MCC Theatre Department

"Gator-Aid", "Lite-Beer", "Dove Soap", "T.W.A." and the famous Alka-Seltzer "I can't believe I ate the whole thing" commercials.

She has done a Walt Disney film, "The Life of Thomas Jefferson", in which she played Jefferson's wife. She has also done a tv-movie with Telly Savalas whom she describes as a "wonderful, sexy, sweet man."

Mrs. Winik prefers directing to acting and she has an impressive directing career. Her most recent directing assignment was of Jamie Farr (Klinger from M*A*S*H) in his touring show "Enter Laughing" which was shown around the country last summer. She is also directing the upcoming musical "Bye, Bye, Birdie" to be presented here at MCC.

Mrs. Winik is currently starring as Amanda in "The Glass Menagerie" in newly opened City Lights Theatre, 250 High St., Perth Amboy.

The Eyes Will Have It

by Quo Vadis Staff Writer

An Eye-Mobile unit, sponsored by the Edison Lions Club, will visit MCC on Thursday, October 23 for free eye screening for the college community.

The Eye-Mobile is fully equipped for checking visual acuity and general health of the eyes.

According to Louis Jensen, coordinator for the Eye-

Mobile, the screening is conducted by an ophthalmologist from the New Jersey Eye Foundation, at no expense to the student or the College. The cost of operating the unit is absorbed by the Lions Club.

After the screening has been completed, and appropriate recommendations are made to the individual, the results of the tests are forwarded to the New Jersey Eye Foundation for further evaluation. If necessary, the Foundation will conduct a follow-up to determine if appropriate action has been taken. In cases of extreme financial need, the Edison Lions Club may assist the individual in obtaining the proper medical attention.

The Eye-Mobile will be stationed in front of the College Center from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 23.

Why The Waste?

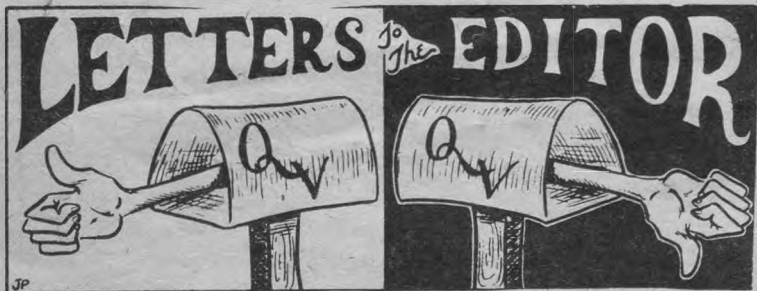

Each semester, along with your schedule, comes a list of recommended textbooks.

With reassurances from the instructors that the books are necessary, you stand in seemingly interminable lines at the book store to spend, on an average, $135 per year for the required texts.

One of the things a student learns to be ready for is the expense incurred in purchasing books. One of the things a student cannot prepare himself for is the feeling of waste he experiences when he realizes how much money he has lost because a large percentage of the books he has purchased may never be used.

I know for a fact that this does not bother any of the independently wealthy students on campus, because I've spoken to both of them. The rest of us, however, are deeply chagrined by this situation. I'm sure few serious students mind undertaking any of the expenses truly necessary for school. It does, however, seem unfair that so many students economize on a personal level so that they can afford to waste money in the buying of useless textbooks.

All we are asking for is a little consideration, a little forethought. Those wasted dollars can go a long way towards other bills.

Letters to the Editor must be submitted to the Quo Vadis Office, Room 316, College Center by 3 p.m. Friday. All copy must be typewritten and double-spaced, not longer than 250 words, and signed. Quo Vadis reserves the right to edit all letters.

To the Editor:

Can anyone direct me to a quiet place to study? Well, I'm not quite sure! The Library may have been the place to go in the past, but it seems like it has taken on the characteristics of a social center. We have a fine library at MCC. There are infinite volumes of books to be read, but unfortunately these books must be checked out, because attempting to read them in the library is often too frustrating an event.

I thought about taking the disruptions on a personal basis, but I thought of a better solution; a security guard stationed in the library. The librarians can't drum the quiet idea into students' minds, but maybe a man in uniform could. The guard could bounce noise makers, take away library cards and privileges, and could use his own discretion as to what constitutes a disruptive action in the library. This would solve the problem immediately.

But what about the students of MCC? Would the presence of a security guard be questioning the integrity of the students attending this school? Yes! That is exactly what it would be questioning. So answer the question and the problem with common sense and a little consideration.

SHHHHHHH!

Do your teachers use the textbooks you have purchased?

1. Sal Borruso: "Some do, some don't. Mostly they skim through the chapters and some just don't use them at all. I feel that there's no sense in bringing my books to class or buying them".

2. Henry Sulikowski: "ACC. 76, there are teachers that make effective use of books but there are teachers that don't. If you have to pay 14 to 18 dollars for books it's a waste."

3. Denise Perrott: MAD, "No, and it's a waste of money. Some teachers dictate the material and the books are sometimes useless".

4. Cheryl Weissman: Collegian Foundation, "No, because the teachers give out notes and never use the textbooks"

Anne Sullivan confronting the Keller family during scene from MCC production of "Miracle Worker."

Miracle Worker Well Received

by Dan Murano

On Thursday, Oct. 16, "The Miracle Worker" opened a weekend run in the Performing Arts Center.

The set was incredible, though it would have probably made more of an effect if the curtain was closed until the beginning of the performance. Technically, things were handled pretty well, with several nice lighting and sound effects.

The casting for the story of the early life of Helen Keller, was almost perfect. Helen's parents were very nicely played by Sandi Eisenstein and Gary Pannullo, along with Chris Kuhlthau who portrayed Helen's older brother Jimmy. The minor characters; the maid, played by Janet Smith, the blind children, the doctor, and Anagnos, the Head of the School for the Blind, played by Frank Cundari were, at the most, believable. It seemed that director Myra Turley didn't really pay too much attention to the minor characters. They appeared unsure of themselves which made certain scenes very uncomfortable to watch.

The deaf-blind Helen Keller, portrayed by 12-year-old Debbie Cacciatore, was excellent. She had captured the emotions of the tortured girl reaching out to life. Linda Ranger, playing the part of Anne Sullivan, was the most radiant person on stage. Her lively air and vitality made the story true and unbelievable. Both actresses deserve recognition in the fighting scenes alone.

Most of the play flowed evenly, except for a few little scenes which bogged it down, mainly from an apparent lack of interest in the actors and actresses themselves. If we overlook these few scenes, it was a pleasure to watch the cast put on an admirable and enjoyable performance.

Afro-Cuban Workshop Jazzes

by Dana Davis

Classical and Modern ballet dancers had the privilege of working under professional supervision at the Afro Cuban Jazz Workshop here at MCC.

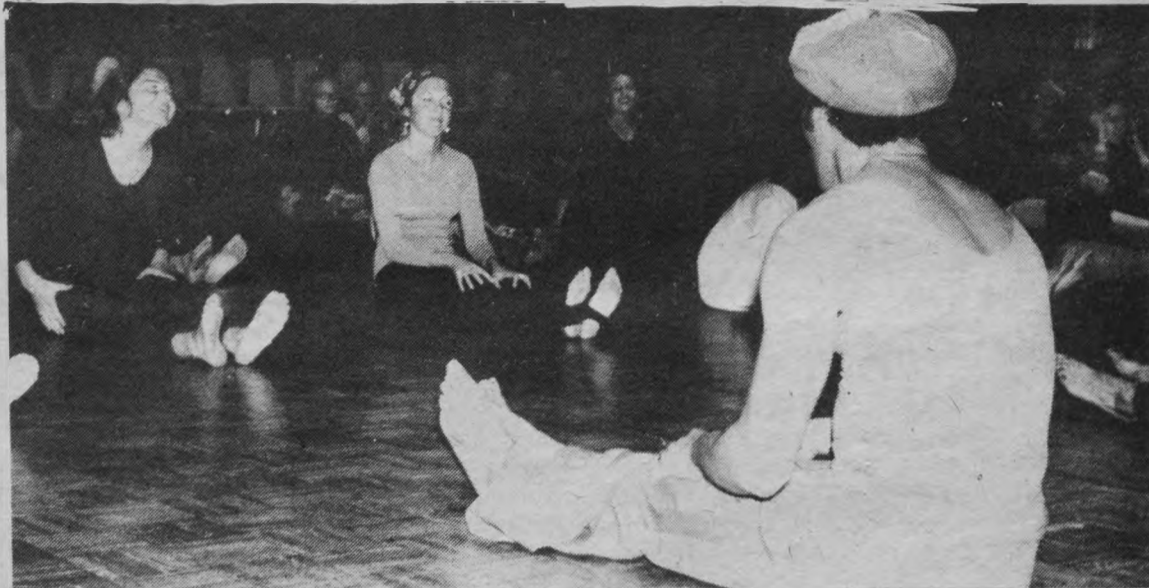

Over 40 enthusiastic dancers loosened up anxiously awaiting the beginning of the workout led by Mr. Frank Hatchett. Mr. Hatchett is well known for his talent in the fields of dance and choreography. He has had two of his students in the Broadway hit The Wiz, three in Raisin, and another student in the film Claudine who also plays in Room 222. He is also the choreographer for the rock groups THE TEMPTATIONS and BLUE MAGIC, and the television series Ebony Affair.

The style of dance performed here was a new experience to most students. Mrs. Lois Hayes (a member of the cast of The Wiz) called it, "an extension of classical dance and modern ballet, an expression of the inner soul". Mr.

Hatchett remarked "this is definitely body language utilizing parts of the body not used before". Mr. Daniel Besarajan set the tempo with vibrant African rhythms from his congo drum, for the physically and internally demanding style of dance.

The workshop was sponsored by the Division of Social Sciences and Humanities, Students Activity, Community Service Continuing Education, and E.O.F.
